employees and not for retraining existing employees and is generally classroom based and often provided by a third party for the employer.

- Training for an individual who is currently employed may be provided when the employee is not earning a self-sufficient wage, as determined by the WDB, and the training relates to the introduction of new technologies, introduction of new production or service procedures, upgrade to new jobs that require additional skills, workplace literacy, or other appropriate training approved by the WDB Director. Wage information must be gathered and kept in the individual's file prior to start of training.
- The individual's IEP (Individual Employment Plan) must justify placing the worker in a customized training contract.

Pre-Award Review:

All businesses seeking to receive funding must complete a Pre-Award Review and a Responsibility Questionnaire to be evaluated as a responsible training provider. A review will include New York Department of State's Division of Corporations, Federal OSHA records, and NYSDOL records.

Customized Training Agreement:

A Customized Training agreement must be executed prior to the commencement of training. Customized training agreements must include policies, procedures, definitions as required by State Policies; requirements for selection of participants, job descriptions; and training outlines justifying the length of training. Participant wages must be specified in the contract, and the contract must provide for an increase in wages. It must be specified in the contract that the participating employer is committed to employ, or in the case of those who are currently employed, to continue to employ participants after successful completion of the program. If the training is not to be provided by in-house staff, the provider must be identified.
